Homily: "Pulled in Two Directions" Rev David Smithson

Morning Tea: Kay

Have you ever said to yourself or to someone else, "I don't know why I did that, I should have known better." When we make a really stupid mistake, we say, "I could kick myself for that." That is what Paul is talking about in this morning's New Testament reading in Romans 7. He wanted to do what was right; yet somehow, he could never get it quite right. He knew it was wrong, and the last thing he wanted to do was to do the wrong thing. Yet somehow, he did it. And the good that he knew he should do, he couldn't get himself to do. Do you ever feel yourself pulled in two directions? God bless, David
